

Barnacarry Picnic 16th.June 2013

There was a certain amount of feeling that we go to the beach, “come rain or shine” this year as the prospect of adjourning to the village hall was not appealing unless it was “bucketing it down”.

So it was with much excitement and gathering of equipment, such as tents, picnics, wet suits, towels, spare clothes that cars loaded and set off for the beach. No we were not going on an Arctic expedition just an Argyll beach in June. Once there we joined more of our number who had come directly from the Brownies night camp-over on Seil. Not much sleep had there.

High cloud, blue skies and sunshine made a perfect day and even though the tide was high on arrival much paddling, splashing and dares of who could sit the longest in the not so balmy water ensued until a call to lunch rallied everyone and picnics were unpacked.

A “home rules” game of rounders in the field just above the beach followed and was enjoyed by everyone; no losers everyone a winner (home rules again)

As the tide went out a “Kilninver Island” was revealed and again the water beckoned with Ken and Matt acting as lifeguards.

Tea and coffee was brewed and more cake tins were discovered and the contents rapidly consumed as they were shared,

A very happy day had by all and hopes that those who could not be with us this year will make it next year.

Our thanks to Patricia Wakeford for allowing our cars down her drive to park at the barns; otherwise we might have needed pack mules.

We hope that you enjoy a few of the photographs taken by Jane.
